CUPID'S ARROW.

On Tuesday night, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Dickson, the wedding of Miss Katherine Randolph Blanton and Mr. J. Samuel Head, Jr., of Jackson, was solemnized. Only the immediate friends and relatives of the bride were present, but it was one of the prettiest home weddings ever in Paris.

The color scheme was pink and white and was carried out in every detail of the decorations, which were very artistic.

The bridesmaids were Miss Sarah Shackleford, of Richmond; Miss May Escott, of Shelbyville; Miss Lacy Irvine, of Bowling Green and Miss Eddie Spears, of this city.

The gowns were of white silk mull, with pink sashes and they carried wreaths of smilax, tied with pink tulle.

Miss Lizette Dickson, niece of the bride, was the maid of honor. Her gown was of pink crepe de chine and lace and she carried an armful of pink roses.

The bride looked very sweet and attractive in an exquisite gown of white panne crepe and Duchess lace, with a shower bouquet of white roses and lillies of the valley., Mr. Mack Clark, of Lexington, was the other attendant.

Dr. L. H. Blanton, father of the bride, performed the ceremony, assisted by Dr.
Rutherford.

After the ceremony, a very delightful lunch was served. The bride's table was round and twelve were seated. The cloth was of white tulle over pink silk. Ropes of smilax and streamers of tulle were suspended from the chandelier to the sides of the table. In the center was a large cut glass vase, filled with pink roses. Silver candelabras, with pink shades and cut glass bon bon dishes with pink and white rosebud mints combined to make a most beautiful table. The place cards were hand-painted Cupids, with the gold monograms.

The bride presented her maids with dainty gold "good luck" pins.

It was an interesting fact that Tuesday was the anniversary of the marriage of the bride's father and mother, and that Dr. Rutherford, who assisted in the ceremony, was a groomsmen upon that occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Head left on the 9:45 train for an extended Eastern trip.

Wanted.

We would like to ask, through the columns of your paper, if there is any person who has need Green's August Flower, for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and Liver Trouble that has not been cured—and we also mean their results, such as sour stomach, fermenting of food, habitual costiveness, nervous dyspepsia, headaches, despondent feelings, sleeplessness—in fact any trouble connected with the stomach or liver? This medicine has been sold for many years in all civilized countries, and we wish to correspond with you and send you one of our books free of cost. If you never tried August Flower, try a 25 cent bottle first. We have never known of its failing. If so, something more serious is the matter with you. The 25 cent size has just been introduced this year. Regular size 75 cents.

Caution!

This is not a gentle word—but when you think how liable you are not to purchase the only remedy that has had the largest sale of any medicine in the world since 1868 for the cure and treatment of Consumption and Throat and Lung troubles without losing its great popularity all these years, you will be thankful we called your attention to Boosee's German Syrup. There are so many ordinary cough remedies made by druggists and others that are cheap and good for light colds perhaps, but for severe Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup—and especially for Consumption, where there is almost expectoration and coughing during the nights and mornings, there is nothing like German Syrup. The 25 cent size has just been introduced this year. Regular size 75 cents.—W. T. BROOKS.

HERBERT'S FUNERAL.

Body of the Ambassador Laid in a Flower-Lined Grave.

Memorial Services Were Held in Washington Attended By the President, His Family and Many Other Distinguished Persons.

London, Oct. 7.—Funeral services over the remains of the late British ambassador to the United States, Rt. Hon. Sir Michael H. Herbert, were held Tuesday in Marlborough House chapel, adjoining St. James palace. Special seats were reserved for members of the diplomatic corps.

The king was represented by the earl of Suffield. The mourners included the earl of Pembroke, Lord Herbert of Lea, the earl of Durham, Earl de Gray, the duke of Beaufort, Viscount Newport, representing Premier Balfour; Charles Ardingley, representing the foreign office; representatives of the various embassies and legations in London, Arthur Ponsonby and Robert Goelet.

The service was conducted by the archdeacon of Wilesshire, Canon Mead and Canon Oliver. The music included Mendelssohn's and Chopin's funeral marches and an interlude specially composed by Sir Hubert Perry, director of the Royal college of music. The body was laid in a flower-lined grave in the church yard.

Washington, Oct. 7.—Memorial services in memory of Rt. Hon. Sir Michael H. Herbert were held in St. John's church Tuesday.

Precisely at 12 o'clock President Roosevelt, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Roosevelt, Secretary Loeb and Col. Symons and Commander Cowles, respectively his military and naval aides, entered the church. They were received by the distinguished assemblage standing, while the thrilling cadences of Chopin's funeral march pealed from the organ.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt were met by Arthur S. Raikes, first secretary of the British embassy, who had been designated by King Edward as his personal representative at the services. They were shown into the first pew on the right side of the main tier of pews and directly in front of the chancel. At the left of Mr. Raikes sat Maj. Maude, military secretary of Lord Minto, governor general of Canada, and his personal representative. Opposite the main tier of pews sat R. T. Wilson, father of Lady Herbert, accompanied by his daughters, Mrs. Ordern Goelet and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and his sons, M. Orme Wilson and R. T. Wilson, Jr. Across the aisle to the right of the president the pews were occupied by Adm. Dewey and Lieut. Gen. Young and their staffs. The members of the diplomatic corps occupied pews directly back of the president, while officers of the army, navy and marine corps occupied seats in the body of the church.

THE MORMON CHURCH.

Elder G. A. Smith Succeeds the Late Apostle Brigham Young.

Salt Lake, Utah, Oct. 7.—At Tuesday's session of the semi-annual conference of the Mormon church, Elder George A. Smith was chosen to fill the vacancy in the council of 12 apostles caused by the death, several months ago, of Apostle Brigham Young. The new apostle is a son of Apostle John Henry Smith, and is the present receiver of the United States land office in Utah. He is a native of Salt Lake and about 40 years old.

He Is Charged With Abstracting Money From a Package.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 7.—Isaac N. Ross, a former special deputy collector, was arrested here Tuesday by Collector of Port Garland, on a charge of abstracting $600 from a package containing $3,000, which he had taken to the express office September 27 to be sent to the sub-treasury, Philadelphia. Ross has since been missing. Bail was fixed at $5,000. He had been employed in the collector's office for 12 years.

ITALIAN LABORERS.

Several Hundred to Be Brought to Birmingham, Ala.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 7.—S. Calanzano, the representative of the Italian consul in this city, has gone to New Orleans for the purpose of conferring with the agents of the Italian Steamship Co., looking to the bringing of several hundred Italian laborers to this district now on board a steamer directly from Italy, which will arrive at New Orleans in a few days.

Convention of Royal Arch Masons. Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 7.—The 32d triennial convention of the general grand chapter of Royal Arch Masons of the United States opened Tuesday. The secretary's report shows the membership numbers 219,965.

Nominated For Governor.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 7.—The republicans of Rhode Island met here in annual convention, formed a permanent organization and selected a ticket which is headed by Col. Samuel P. Colt, of Bristol, president of the United States Rubber Co.

To Investigate Alleged Bodding. Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 7.—An investigation of alleged bodding on the board of education of Kansas City, Kan., promises to end in sensational disclosures. A grand jury may be asked to probe the matter.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN.

Fleet and Army of Both Powers Ready For Emergencies.

Yokohama, Oct. 7.—With the approach of October 8 the nominal date for Russia's evacuation of Manchuria, great tension is observable among the Japanese populace, but in diplomatic circles it is reaffirmed that hopefulness prevails of an amicable settlement of the imbroglio between Russia and Japan on the basis of minor concessions by Russia in Corea and Manchuria, though officials do not profess to expect that the evacuation of Manchuria will be effected on the exact date named.

Baron von Rosen, the Russian minister to Japan, has returned here from a conference with the Viceroy Alexieff at Port Arthur, and had a short conference with Baron Komura, the Japanese foreign minister, on October 3. Baron von Komura has since given out a hopeful interview, but the Japanese minister for war and navy thereafter had a long conference with the emperor. Marquis Ito, president of the privy council, and Viscount Katsu, the premier, indicating that preparations are going on to meet any eventuality. The fleet and the army are both without question in readiness and large supplies for both the army and navy have been accumulated. The arsenals have been quietly at work for a long time past and the defenses have been minutely inspected.

Popular feeling in Japan is exasperated at Russia's dilatory tactics, and the excitement has been aggravated by the sensational press, which is constantly circulating rumors of fresh Russian aggressions. Many of these are of the most circumstantial character and are calculated to inflame public opinion. The officials deprecate these reports, which, it is believed in some quarters, emanate from Russian sources with the object of forcing Japan's hand.

The Japanese statesmen remain calm. Japan apparently considers herself capable of dealing with Russia single-handed. It is true that England is supporting Japan strongly at Peking and Seoul, Corea, but it is thought here that England and France desire peace at any price.

FRED SEYMOUR BARRINGTON.

Files a Motion to Quash Indictments Returned Against Him.

St. Louis, Oct. 7.—A motion was filed in the Clayton circuit court Tuesday by Frederick Seymour Barrington to quash the indictments recently returned against him by the grand jury, charging him with the murder of Jas. P. McCann. In the motion to quash it is alleged that the indictment does not set forth or charge facts to constitute a criminal offense.

HON. W. S. BISSELL DEAD

Was Postmaster General During Cleveland's Term.

During Latter Part of His Illness Messages of Inquiry Were Received From the Ex-President and Members of Cabinet.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Wilson S. Bissell, former postmaster general, died at 10:15 o'clock Tuesday night. At about noon he sank into a deep sleep, and it was with difficulty that he was aroused at intervals during the afternoon for nourishment and medicine. The end came easily and peacefully. Dr. Dewitt Sauer, the physician who has been attending him during his recent illness, and members of the family were at his bedside.

Mr. Bissell suffered with complications thought to be akin to Bright's disease, although not well understood.

On June 1 Mr. Bissell's trouble became so serious that he was sent to New York to consult specialists. It was thought an operation would be performed, but on examination the specialists decided that it would be better for the patient first to rebuild his health. He was sent to his summer home, Bar Harbor, where he spent several weeks. He spent most of the time there in bed and it was realized that his case was hopeless. In September he returned to Buffalo. Some important legal matters in which he was interested were disposed of and Mr. Bissell was again forced to bed. He suffered no pain, sleeping most of the time.

When awake his mind was always clear and he conversed with members of the family and the physicians. During the latter part of his illness numerous messages of inquiry were received from former President Cleveland and members of the cabinet in which Mr. Bissell served as postmaster general.

COKE OVENS SHUTTING DOWN.

This Action Is Due to the Slump in the Pig Iron Market.

Connellsville, Pa., Oct. 7.—A careful estimate of the number of coke ovens that have been blown out in the Connellsville fields during the past week is placed at 3,000. O. W. Kennedy, general superintendent of the H. C. Frick Coke Co., Tuesday stated that during the latter part of last week and the first part of this week 2,000 ovens belonging to the Frick company had been closed down. Besides this it is estimated that fully 1,000 more ovens belonging to the W. J. Rainey Co. and independent concerns throughout the region have been blown out. Mr. Kennedy in discussing the shutdown stated that it was due to the slump in the pig iron market, which he believes will be only temporary and that the ovens will be going again in a short time.

Naick, N. Y., Oct. 7.—A farm owned by Russell Sage, at Sickletown, Rockland county, was sold at the county tax sale Tuesday for non-payment of taxes, amounting to $113. It was bought in by the county.

The county also bought in the Andre monument property at Tappan, where Cyrus W. Field erected a monument to mark the spot of Maj. Andre's execution. After Mr. Field's death his heirs refused to pay the taxes on the property.

The Thrice-a-Week World was a brilliant success in the beginning and has steadily grown ever since. Time is test of all things, and has set its seal of approval on the Thrice-a-Week World, which is widely circulated in every State and Territory of the Union, and wherever there are people who can read our mother tongue.

This paper for the coming winter and the year 1903, will make its new service, and more extensive than ever. All events of importance, no matter where they happen, are reported accurately and promptly.

The subscriber for only one dollar a year, gets three papers every week, and more general reading than most great dailies can furnish at five or six times the price.

The Thrice-a-Week World is absolutely fair in its political news. Partisan bias is never allowed to affect its news columns, and Democrat and Republican alike can obtain in its pages truthful accounts of all the great political campaigns.

In addition to all the news, the Thrice-a-Week World furnishes the best serial fiction, elaborate market report and other features of interest.

The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year and this price for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and THE BOURBON NEWS together one year for $2.75.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $3.00.

JUST think of it. A baby is born every five minutes in New York. The death rate there is falling from one third to one-tenth, owing to measures for protecting babies from impure milk and unsanitary arrangements. The increase is caused by the tremendous immigration to New York City.

October Brings the Fullness of Fall Readiness.

The Store sparkles with Newness and Brilliance, from top to bottom. No fashion shown in this section of Kentucky ever presented such a comprehensive array of all things interesting to women in matters of style and dress. A personal trip to the larger cities could not secure for the most favored woman a view of Ready-to-Wear apparel so comprehensive, or artistic, so original and beautiful as is presented by our Autumn Exhibition of Tailored Suits and Separate Coats.

Here is the "creme de la creme" of what the best Eastern designers have produced this season. Here are suits that would grace the most important dress function of the year—a collection, the equal of which has never before been gathered by any store in Central Kentucky.

Our big Cloak Department attracts hundreds of people from every section of the Blue Grass, and the walking suits are praised and purchased with enthusiasm and women are gratified to know that the novelty suit bought at Kaufman, Straus & Co. is never duplicated for some other wearer.

But the Fashion Show is Endless.

The French Lingerie.

The Infants' Wear Things.

Handsome Woolen Goods.

The long Coat Suits and all other Fall and Winter Suits for Women, for that matter, require a manly fabric to bring out their proper effect. Manufacturers have copied their designs from the men's goods and can scarcely produce them fast enough to meet the demand.

We have been so fortunate as to secure a large quantity of the real men's woolens and thus provide at a low price fabrics far handsomer, more serviceable and that will tailor far better than any of the copy fabrics that cost even more.

THE FLOWER ON THE TRAIL.

My heart was weary yesterday.
I said: The day is long;
The way is long;
Shuts out the morning song;
The rush of myriad hurrying feet
That crowd the upward slope
Have crushed the daisies into dust
And spent the dews of hope.

Then straight within the trampled path
The eager throng had trod,
A little purple flower unclosed,
Nor pined for greener sod;
And one whose load had weighted sore
Looked down at it and smiled,
And dreamed of woodland trails he'd loved

To follow when a child.

So, still, when bitterness and fret
Would drown the melody,
Some little harmony steals in
To set the music free;
And we may keep till eventide
The morning joys we know,
If even in our hearts there live
The daisies and the few.

CHAPTER VII.

A REVELATION.

Once on the road, Bessemer and his men put spurs to their horses and galloped at a lively rate. Scouts had reported that the enemy was resting not far off. Bessemer, riding at the head of his mounted dragoons, the perspiration streaming down his red face, his eyes sparkling with anticipation of victory, his well-knit figure held erect in the saddle with British military stiffness, looked what he was—a combination of force and fire.

A turn in the road brought them in sight of a stream. The troopers gave a shout of triumph, broken by Bessemer's ringing command. In the water were nude men, bathing and swimming and sporting; along its edge, on the opposite side, were others, stripped to their waists, doing their "family" washing; while farther up the bank, under such shade as the sparse cotton-wood trees gave, were yet more, smoking or napping or eating. Most of them had their rifles beside them and their horses close by, but it availed them little.

Their cry of astonishment, chagrin and terror beat the hot air ere that of Bessemer's men died away. The naked wretches in the water were cut down before they could escape. Across the stream with eager haste, yet with perfect order, went the British, carrying all before them. In vain did Sumter start from his nap under one of his baggage-wagons, seize the nearest horse by its mane, saddleless and bridleless as it was, and try to rally his soldiers. The day was lost, and though the English colonel did not capture the "brigand," as he had boasted he would, he failed in little else he set out to do; and, indeed, few save Sumter himself escaped; not enough to warrant pursuit in that appalling heat.

The British returned the way they had come, exulting. Ever thoughtful of his troops, though he was himself most anxious to get back to the Ellery plantation and make that his stopping place for the night, Bessemer perceived that the heat and the sharp, hard ride since dawn had put considerable strain upon his men. Noting a large, comfortable-looking house setting some distance off the road, surrounded by a fine grove of trees, he asked, "Can you tell me, Edward, who lives yonder? Methinks it is a good place for an afternoon rest. Be they rebels or tories, we shall become their unwelcome guests, but I should like to learn which they are, that I may know whether to request or command."

"They are tories," the boy answered eagerly, "as loyal to our king as my own family; and they will make you a gladly welcome, I am sure, as my people have." Bessemer perceived that under the summer flush which already covered his cheek there rose a richly wave of crimson.

"Aha, a sweetheart residing there," he thought, and with a sympathetic feeling turned his horse off the road and entered the gate, which stood conveniently open.

The house was not the imposing mansion the Ellery homestead was, but there was a warm southern welcome awaiting the intruders and a piece of news mightily to Bessemer's liking as well. A courier, riding hard to overtake the British commander, had likewise stopped there for rest, and scarce had the English colonel dismounted ere he handed him a dispatch from Cornwallis conveying the news of Gates' defeat.

There were three daughters of the house, all of them vivacious young women, as Bessemer soon discovered. "Oh, how delightful," they exclaimed, when the contents of the dispatch became known: "two great victories in one day; think of it!"

"Not in one day, ladies," Bessemer reminded them. "Gen. Cornwallis won his on the sixteenth."

"It does not matter; we hear of them the same day," the youngest persisted. "We assuredly should do something to celebrate so great a piece of fortune. If we could only have a dance," she added, with a suggestive look in the direction of her mother. "Mamma, why can't we induce Col. Bessemer and his officers to remain here for the night, and let us move the furniture from the big west room and have a dance there? Meanwhile, we could scour the neighborhood for girls. Edward, do you not think Jane would come?"

"Nay, I have a better plan," the lieutenant answered. "My mother made Col. Bessemer and myself promise ere we left that, if we routed Sumter in time, we should return home and spend the night there. They will be expecting us, and my father will be most grievously disappointed if we do not come; but why not have a dance on our lawn, as did the summer before I went to England? Remember you, Peggy, what fun we had?"

"Fun? Oh, it was delicious," she answered, clasping her hands in ecstasy. "The plan pleased Bessemer better than the first proposed, and so it was arranged. He encamped his little army and most of his prisoners in one of the Ellery fields that evening. One of the prisoners he considered too valuable a capture to risk thus, and he besought Mrs. Ellery for a special room for him. As a prisoner, he was second only to Sumter himself.

"Now, dear madam," he said to his hostess, when these arrangements had been completed, "you must let me take the burden of our frolic tonight off your hands. I want this to be my festivity, given in honor of your neighboring Tory friends. 'Tis sufficient that you grant us the privilege of using your beautiful grounds, and I shall see to it that their loneliness is not marred."

Mrs. Ellery made a feint of reluctant concession to this, but in truth she was not sorry to wash her hands of all but the indoor preparations. She and Jane immediately set about seeing to the making of cakes, salads, and various confections to serve as refreshments.

Dressed in the freshest of the evening gowns left from her last visit to Charleston, Miss Ellery made a stately and handsome figure that evening as her mammy tucked a high, jewelled comb into her complicated coiffure and gave the last pats and touches to her costume.

Carriages began to roll up the avenue, and Jane descended the stairs that she might assist her stepmother and Col. Bessemer in receiving their guests.

None of Bessemer's enemies, and he had not few, could deny to him the qualities of taste and energy. The combination of these with that fine executive ability which enabled him always to get full score out of those under him had insured the success of his dance. The scene was beautiful. Among the trees strolled many pairs of lovers. Upon the rustic benches sat the chaperons and elderly guests, while the tarpaulin was gay with dancers moving in the stately measures of the minuet or revelling in the sprightlier movements of livelier dances.

There were beautiful women in plenty; southern women with bright eyes, animated faces and rich voices, dressed in the beautiful costumes of the day, the low-cut bodices, the flowing skirts, the hair waving over ears and caught by high, jewelled combs at the back, the pointed-toed slippers with flashing buckles, the ruffles fans and cobwebbed handkerchiefs.

And as for the men, they were as gallant a lot as one would wish to see; the British officers smothered in red coats and gold lace; their men in knee-breeches, ruffled shirts and silk-lined coats.

Well pleased, Bessemer moved among his guests, dropping a pleasant word here, a merry jest there, but never quite losing sight of the younger hostess. He was aware that beneath the smiling gracefulness with which she was assisting him there lurked a certain constraint, and he could well guess the cause.

One lady, rather exceeding the age when it was fashionable to be found still unmarried in those days, tapped the colonel on the arm with her fan as he was passing the bench where she sat.

"Tell me, dear colonel, how many prisoners did you take to-day? A marvelous number, from all I hear, and they do say you have a most mysterious one whom you have hid in Mrs. Ellery's garret. Nay, they go farther and state that it is Jane's lover, Godfrey Worthington. Poor Jane! It would go hard with her if ill were to befall Godfrey; they have been devoted to each other for so many years, though they do say her stepmother will not hear to the match. Tell me—she dropped her voice to a confidential whisper—'Is it really he you have?'"

"Madam," Bessemer answered, gathering himself together, "I know naught of this Worthington of whom you speak, but I should say that the gentleman whom I hold as prisoner were more suited to be Miss Ellery's father than her lover, since he is a man fully 60 years of age, white-headed and gray-bearded. His name is Pierce."

"Pierce? Gen. Pierce? That horrid old rebel? Oh, how delightful that you have caught him. He is the very one who hung the tories this summer."

"The very one, madam, and he shall pay for it."

He left her with a courteous bow, but his heart was not as light as when she had accosted him. What was this silly woman's chatter about a lover of Jane's? A Godfrey Worthington, forsooth? Of course, there was nothing in it; and yet he must be sure.

CHAPTER VIII.
AS THE DANCE WENT ON.

I drew aside pretty Peggy Winston, who was the occasion of the dance. "Do you know aught," he asked, "of a person by the name of Godfrey Worthington?"

"Godfrey Worthington? Oh, yes, I have known him all my life. Why, Jane and Jane are sweethearts. Have been for years, though they do say her mother does not approve the match, and was most glad when he espoused the rebel cause that she might have excuse for forbidding his coming here. Did you not know that you nearly captured him once? It was last May, when you stopped at Jane's for breakfast. He was coming to see her then, knowing, I suppose, that her father and mother were from home and thinking it a good opportunity to press his suit. He was almost up to the house before he discovered your soldiers."

Bessemer's brow grew black. So this was the young brave who had given him such a turn that fine spring morning?

"'Twas just like Godfrey," the girl's voice went on. "He is ever doing daring things. It is for that Jane loves him most, I think; though he is handsome too—oh, so handsome! I have heard it whispered often that Jane is no less a rebel at heart than he, but that she keeps it concealed to maintain peace with her stepmother and Edward."

"In truth, dear lady," Bessemer answered, "methinks report doth most grossly wrong Mistress Jane. None, I am sure, could be more loyal than she." But he tore himself away with some troubous thoughts running through his brain.

He sought an early opportunity to see Jane by himself. "Come, sweet mistress," he said, "and take a stroll with me. I long to see if I cannot frighten away that pensive look upon your lovely face. What solemn thoughts have been playing havoc with your gayety to-night?"

Jane looked at him in some surprise. "Have I not been gay?" she asked. "I thought I had. I know of no excuse for solmen musings unless, indeed, it be the solemnity of contrasts, and, in truth, I could not think, as I watched this beautiful scene which you have conjured for us to-night, what a medley our life now is. This afternoon, from my chamber window, I saw you take past our house the prisoners you had captured. Such sad, weary-faced men they were, many of them sorely wounded and scarce able to walk. My heart bled for them; yet here to-night we are in the midst of music and dancing, and they within earshot of it all. How cruel, how heartless it must seem to them!"

"Methinks, madam," Bessemer answered, with a sneer born of his accumulated irritation, though policy warned him of the unwise of showing it, "methinks you show most wondrous solicitude for these rebels; and what think you I have heard to-night? That you are one at heart."

A merry look spread over Jane's face. If she could but keep him fending her upon the subject of tory or rebel, she might prevent him from broaching the other subject she dreaded, for she was not yet prepared to say whether or not she would marry him.

"And so you have found me out?" she cried in mock dismay. "Ah, colonel, what punishment will you mete to me? Am I to be carried a captive on one of your prison ships now lying in Charleston harbor? They say they are most unpleasant places to reside in. Or am I to be hung, or what?"

Bessemer looked down at her, the gravity of his face softening before the sparkle in her eyes. "I do not know," he said, "what punishment could be great enough to mete out to one who withdraws so precious an ally from the king's cause; however, with your permission, fair lady, we will leave that most serious question for future consideration. Tell me rather what you think of the success of my plan for keeping in good humor tory friends? Think you not this entertainment will make the ladies wish the harder that we might remain visitors instead of those unmannerly rebels and inspire our sympathizers among your neighbors with renewed ardor? Come, sweet enemy, give me your opinion."

"I doubt not you are right, colonel," she answered, saucily. "Methinks I have heard that it did indeed tax the fertile brain of your general and yourself to hatch schemes for keeping in line your tory allies; but my Aunt Susannah says such is ever the handicap of a bad cause. The enthusiasm of its followers, lacking the fuel of righteousness, soon smoulders and must be constantly rekindled; while a good cause—well, she would remind you that the American patriots do not need a dance to inspire them."

"A neat speech, my beautiful rebel," he observed; "but is this all the reward I am to receive when I had far more in mind the hope of giving you enjoyment than of entertaining your tory neighbors? Nay, do not turn away. Hear me out. This morning when I rode from your door my pulses throbbed with hope; but to-night something in your manner thwarts me. What has reared this barrier between us? Have you spent those few short hours in making of your heart a fortress? And, if so, what weapons can I use that will batter down its walls? Will patience and persistence do the work? Then, indeed, will I never despair."

"We all know," Jane observed. "that Col. Bessemer adds to his reputation as a gallant soldier that of an adroit strategist. I see he would fain betray the heart's owner into a confession of the strength or weakness of its forces; but methinks it would be wiser for the besieged to permit the assailant to determine for himself what weapons to use."

"Ah," said Bessemer, half bitterly, half questioningly, "if I could only be sure a certain rebel were not harbored within the walls of that heart, I might be more encouraged to make the attack."

"And he is a loyal soldier of his majesty the king to be daunted by a rebel?" Jane asked. "Fie! I would not have thought it!"

The Englishman's face darkened.

"No, on my soul, is he not?" he cried, "nor by ten thousand rebels. I accept your challenge, madam. The time is not far distant when I hope to prove myself a match for that rebel. Meanwhile, it behoves me to select one of yonder forest's stout trees for stringing up another rebel now in my keeping. By daybreak, I trust, we shall be rid of him and leave his dangling body as a warning to others of his ilk."

The brightness died out of the girl's face. "You cannot mean that you will hang that poor old gentleman who is now a captive in our garret! I saw him when they brought him to the house this afternoon, and I thought his face most sweet and noble, while I have ever heard him spoken of as brave."

"Aye, brave enough; but 'poor old gentleman' scarce fits so bloody-handed a wretch. I have not forgot that three of our allies were strung up by his command four weeks ago, and, by my faith, their death shall be avenged."

"But they were marauders, who plundered dwellings and murdered women and children. At least, so I have heard. It will not bring back their lives to take another life, and surely it were better to be merciful and teach these despised rebels the justice and moderation of their opponents than to set them an example of cruelty and vengfulness."

SHIRTS GROW ON TREES.

What an Old Sailor Said Conia
Be Found on South Sea Islands.

"Shirts grow on trees where I came from," said the old sailor, according to the Philadelphia Record.

"How so, shipmate?" a pale clerk asked.

The sailor emptied his glass and wiped his mouth with the back of his hand. "I'm a-speakin'," he said. "of the South seas. You know them islands over there?"

"Sure," said the clerk.

"Well, that's where I mean that shirts grow on trees. There's a kind of a willow tree on them islands with a soft, flexible bark. A native selects a tree with a trunk that's just a little bigger round than what he is. He makes a ring with his knife around the trunk through the bark, and he makes another ring four foot below. Then, with a slit of the knife, he draws the bark off the same as a boy does in makin' a willow whistie, and he's got a fine, durable shirt. All he needs to do is to dry it out, make two holes for the arms, and put a lacin' in this back to draw it tog'her."

"In the spring of the year the shirts are gathered. Men and women both go out at that time to look for trees that fit them. These bark shirts are treated so as to be soft and flexible. They don't look bad. Gosh hanged if they look bad at all, for shirts that grow on trees."

Motto Worth Adopting.
Admiral Sir John Fisher, who replied for the British navy to a toast at a recent Royal Academy banquet, said in the course of his speech: "I always think on these occasions of the first time I went to sea on board my first ship, a little sailing two-decker, and I say inscribed in great big gold letters the one word 'Silence!' Underneath was another good motto, 'Deeds, not words.' I have put that into every ship I have commanded since. This leads me to another motto, which is better still. When I was commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean I went to inspect a small destroyer, only 250 tons, but with such pride and swagger that she might have been 16,000 tons. The admiral in command took me round. She was in beautiful order and I came aft to the wheel and saw there 'Ut Veniant Omnes.' 'Hallo!' I said, 'what the deuce is that?' Saluting me, he said, 'Let 'em all come.' That was not boasting, that was the sense of conscious efficiency that permeates the whole fleet—and I used to think, as the admiral it would be irresistible, provided the admiral was up to the mark."

THE CLUTCH OF CHANCE.

"The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong; . . . but time and chance happeneth to them all."—Ecc. 9:11.
For the man who wins, there is pomp and pride,
And the laurel wreath, and the cheer, beside;
And for him who fights but in fighting, fails,
There are echoes still of the trumpet calls;
But there is no balm in his bitter lot
If he meets defeat with his fight unthought.

There are sore defeats that are all unknown,
And they send their gloom to the proudest throne;
And they plunge their shade on the humblest life;
For they bring no stress and they bring no strife;
By a time or chance is the loser caught,
And he knows defeat ere his fight is fought.

There are singers mute—and their hearts are wrung,
And their souls are thrilled with the songs unsung;

There are men who dream of a picture true,
But the hand is still and the canvas bare;

And the others, too, with the goals unsought;
They have seen defeat with their fight unsought.

If a man goes down with his sword aflash,
And has heard the lance and the armor crash—
If he loses then, he will shed no tears;
He hath dealt his blows, he has heard the cheers;
But is soul must shrink from he knows not what;
When he meets defeat with his fight unsought.—Chicago Daily Tribune.

alas, they understood one another not at all.

And the other couple—John and Alice—life went almost as badly with them. Alice, with her superabundant intelligence and vitality, grew to feel as the months went by that her sturdy and commonplace husband did not understand her. She appreciated his sterling worth and his unyielding reliability, but she could always touch bottom—there was no depth to explore. Her unconquerable vitality rebelled at the hard-and-fast bounds she found in his character. She adored his manly physiognomy and his sturdy character, and she told herself again and again that he was the sort of man to tie to—one of the salt of the earth; but her unquenchable spirit rebelled at bounds and rules, and it got so she fairly hated figures, facts and reason. She longed for flights into the mystic realm of ideality, into those realms where vital forces could override rules and methods.

Well, you can see for yourself that John could not understand anything of that sort. Honest, conscientious, sterling John could move only along the lines of his own understanding. And he resented, in a manly and honest way, the breach Alice had placed between them. He had disregarded no obligation, no duty, no sacrifice. He had been altogether unselfish and faithful, and somehow he had not succeeded in welding his life with that of his wife. His hopes, his ideals had been shattered.

Now, mind you, all this time, while these thoughts and ideas had been percolating through the minds of these four simpletons, they had, all of them, been constant companions and friends.

So it was that the artistic mind of Clarence began to appreciate the depths and wealth of the nature of Alice—contrasting it to the narrowness and poverty of that of Gracia. And by that same token Alice awoke one day all of a quiver with an appreciation of the tremendous sweep of the nature of Clarence along the lines of her own aspirations.

It was a dangerous discovery, and as it came to these two people it nearly floored them.

The harder they fought the more tense the new situation grew. To the soul of each the commonplace qualities of wife and husband grew more oppressive as they realized in each other the joys of perfect appreciation and perfect fellowship. The end was certain as the multiplication table, and finally they gave up the struggle for conventionality and honor and resolved to shatter their vows and their reputations, to give up kindred, associates and home and wreck the structure they had been building since childhood and flee to an unknown country, there to begin a new life in which their mutual love would be ample compensation for all they left.

Brave in their resolution, but guilty in the consciousness of the great wrong they were doing their loyal consorts, the two slipped into a close carriage on the evening of the 16th of June, 1899, and were driven rapidly to the depot, where they boarded a train bound for New York, there to sail for European shores, where they had planned to begin their new life.

In the meantime both John Bedwell and Gracia Cole had felt the widening breach in their respective homes, although neither had the slightest suspicion of the state of affairs between Clarence Cole and Alice Bedwell.

Being thrown together much, Gracia began to take a new delight in the society of the sturdy John Bedwell.

She could understand his mental attitude, his plain, everyday talk, his natural human methods, whereas Clarence's high-strung, artistic impulses and idealities oppressed and bewildered her. And John, disappointed and puzzled at his failure to understand Alice and weld his life with hers, and resenting the attitude of inferiority she placed him in, looked with new eyes upon Gracia and realized her surpassing beauty. And as he talked more and more to her and found that she understood so thoroughly his thoughts and aspirations, his heart warmed toward her. Finally he awakened with a start to the realization that he loved her and that his love for Alice was dead. And presently she found her own heart had gone out to John. So when the fires of the new love had attained fever heat both were more ready to obey their impulses than the others, for they had not the condescending pity—rather a sting of injured pride.

John methodically wound up his business affairs and looked up a new location where he could reestablish himself safely, and it came to pass that on the evening of June 16, 1899, he entered a close carriage with Gracia and they were driven rapidly to the depot, where they boarded a train bound for San Francisco, there to take steamer for Australia.

The two trains stood on the same track, the engines heading in opposite directions. Both left at exactly 11 o'clock. Shortly before that hour the two couples, who had left the same day on their wedding journeys only two short years before, and who were now fleeing from each other, passed through the gate but a moment or two apart, boarded the separate trains and were whirled away in opposite directions as fast as the steam monsters could carry them.

The strange part of the affair is that neither couple ever knew that the other had eloped, and the friends of both had no suspicion of anything wrong, but wondered deeply at the sudden and mysterious departure of the four.

And Gracia? The long months brought to her also the bitterness of dead leaves. Her handsome and talented husband did not yield to her the adoration and happiness she had so warmly craved. She could not guess why, but there was something lacking—something real and essential to her nature. As the months went by he appeared more and more to her as a promise than a reality. She was not at all an idealist; she wanted to see and feel—not dream.

And so they drifted apart and came almost to despise one another, because,

BIG PRICES TO HORSESHOERS.

Expert Blacksmiths Who Work for Racing Stables Receive Large Salaries.

Robert Bonner was the man who started fancy prices for horseshoeing when he paid $100 for shoeing Lester. Owners of big stables to-day pay far more than that for shoeing a horse, but they don't pay it to a man keeping a blacksmith shop, and doing public business, as Mr. Bonner did. The money goes in the way of salaries and presents to expert blacksmiths who work only for owners of big stables, and who travel with crack racing horses wherever they go. Some of these blacksmiths get $12,000 a year and expenses, besides a liberal present, if the owner has had lucky year, says the New York Times.

The blacksmith of a crack stable is constantly asked for cast-off shoes from crack horses by persons who want to get them and frame them, "just for luck."

When it comes down to the useful truck horse, there is a very different story. The price for shoeing him is fixed by the Blacksmiths' Union at two dollars. That is for an average horse, with a shoe weighing about two pounds. But some of the big truck horses around the docks require shoes weighing from three to four pounds. At the present price of iron blacksmiths cannot afford to shoe horses like that for less than $2.50 or $3. When drivers refuse to pay the sum, the blacksmith finds that he is very busy. Sometimes the driver will wait half a day, and then not get served at the union price. If he moves along to another shop, he finds they are prepared for him. Many blacksmiths' shops have telephones nowadays, or there is a pay station near by where the smith can send word along the line. Blacksmiths accommodate one another in this way. If the driver complains to the union about the only comfort he gets is a promise to investigate.

It is not generally known that blacksmiths' shops in New York are open Sunday mornings from eight to ten o'clock. This is for the benefit of horses that cast shoes on Saturday night, or men who cannot spare their horses during the week to get new shoes or have old ones tightened up. On the East and West side of the city, below Forty-second street to Cherry Hill, blacksmiths' shops are as busy as barbers' shops early Sunday mornings.

The blacksmiths and truck drivers have a common grievance, which they are trying to have their district leaders lug into the municipal campaign, if possible. Often a horse casts a shoe in the street. If he is kept working he is likely to go lame and have lockjaw. It is the driver's duty to know the nearest blacksmith's shop, and go there at once. If the driver hasn't the money to shoe the horse, the blacksmith is willing to take the number of his truck and send the bill to the firm. But it is necessary, always, in such cases, for the driver to leave his wagon, with his other horse, in the street. Then, in nine cases out of ten, a police officer comes along, and, under the street ordinances, takes his wagon away. Blacksmiths and drivers are making a common cause to get this ordinance repealed.

THE CHIPMUNK AT HOME.

Spends Most of the Autumn in Storing Away Food for the Winter.

The little chipmunk, which we see scampering along the stone walls everywhere, is one of the very prettiest of our four-footed animals. By reason of his beautiful markings of black, buff and chestnut he is sometimes called the painted squirrel, and because he seldom leaves the ground for the trees he is also known as the ground-squirrel, says Woman's Home Companion. He is one of the most provident of animals, spending most of the autumn in storing away food to last him through the winter. First of all, though, he digs a long, winding tunnel in the earth, with several short branches, which he uses as storerooms. Into these he carries nuts of all kinds, wheat, buckwheat, grass-seed and any other available food which will keep. He carries these things, a few at a time, in two pouches—one in each cheek—and when you see him homeward bound on an autumn morning, you will notice that his face looks very much swollen. Watch him a little while and you will see him enter his burrow by a small round hole, close to an old stump, perhaps. In a few moments he will have stored his load of provisions, and will appear at the doorway with the swelling all gone from his face.

When the weather becomes cold in November, the chipmunk retires to his well-stocked burrow and sleeps away the large part of the winter, waking up at intervals to stretch his limbs and to sample the good things he spent so much time in gathering. When the warm days toward the close of February herald the approach of spring, the little ground-squirrel comes to the door of his home to sniff the fresh air and to warm himself in the strengthening sunlight.

CHOLERA CURE

~FOR HOGS AND POULTRY.~

Farmers, you need no longer fear to raise and feed Hogs. We not only claim to cure Cholera, but we guarantee to prevent any such disease from breaking out among your Hogs or Poultry, if our remedy is used as directed. It is also fine for Brood Sows before farrowing, being a good blood medicine, which places them in a healthy condition. You cannot afford to be without this remedy if you expect to raise and feed Hogs, as you will more than make the price of the medicine in the extra gain in your hogs, and then you can rest assured they will have no disease. If they do we will refund the money. Write for testimonials.
